BOUNTIFUL OF EASTON

There's no law that says holiday tables have to be decked out in seasonal colors and accented with shiny ornaments and fir boughs. Indulge your inner Santa on Christmas Eve and Day, but try some out-of-box thinking for those other dinner parties between Thanksgiving and New Year's.

We wanted to put together a table that was crisp, elegant; and flexible enough to take you through several dinner parties. Nothing does that better than this combination of blue and white.

We used an assortment of vintage and new blue-and-white vases and set them on a blue-and-white runner that coordinates with navy placemats and navy and white napkins. The centerpiece is filled out with glass hurricanes and candles, white ceramic vegetables, and pearlescent shells. For a simpler look, or smaller table, just use fewer elements.

We think the polished look of this setting is a perfect contrast to the rustic farm table and woven rattan chairs. The oversized blue-and-white pillows on the chairs unify the look.

This setting can be used throughout the year by simply changing the flowers to ones that are appropriate to the season. Think cherry blossom and tulips for spring, lilies for summer, and magnolias for fall and the holiday season.
